Renee Liguori trained professionally with Ellison Ballet and SLK Ballet, both in New York City.

Upon her graduation from Ellison Ballet in 2010, Renee received a full time contract to both Orlando Ballet in Florida, and Nashville Ballet, Tennessee, choosing Nashville.

She worked as a professional dancer with Nashville Ballet and danced all the classics as well as some contemporary works.

Due to an injury Renee retired from the stage early to receive surgery and trained as a teacher with Sara Knight and SLK Ballet. She recently returned to the stage to dance the lead in Paquita. She remains a freelance dancer and is now a full time member of faculty with SLK Ballet.

Renee is also a graduate student at Fordham University where she is a Psychology major and will graduate in 2015.
